Title: UNSUB(S);
GARY MARTIN DEVORE - VICTIM
KIDNAPPING

Synopsis: Preliminary inquiry initiated to determine federal jurisdiction based on request for assistance from local agency.

Details: On 7/9/97, Lieutenant [REDACTED] Santa Barbara County Sheriff's Office (SBSO), Santa Barbara, California, contacted the Santa Maria Resident Agency, Los Angeles Field Office, to request assistance in a matter involving the mysterious disappearance of GARY MARTIN DEVORE, who was last heard from by his wife on 6/28/97.

b7C

DEVORE, a white male, date of birth 9/17/41, is a screen writer who was formerly married to NAT KING COLE's widow, MARIA COLE. DEVORE is currently married to WENDY B. OATES-DEVORE, white female, date of birth [REDACTED] Their residence is located at [REDACTED] Carpinteria, California.

b6
b7C

On 6/23/97, DEVORE left Carpinteria, California, en route to Santa Fe, New Mexico, to visit actress MARSHA MASON, who resides at [REDACTED] Santa Fe, New Mexico. DEVORE arrived at MASON's residence on 6/24/97. The purpose of the visit was to finish work on a script. DEVORE made the trip alone in a 1997 Ford Explorer, Eddie Bauer model, white in color, California license 3NGH592.

Re: 7A-LA-208769, 07/10/1997

DEVORE left Santa Fe on Friday, 6/27/97, en route back to Carpinteria, California. OATES-DEVORE says that she received a cellular telephone call from DEVORE on at or about 1:00 AM on Saturday, 6/28/97. OATES-DEVORE reports that DEVORE told her that he was in the area west of Barstow, California, he was anxious to see her, and he would be home at or about 4:00 AM that same date. OATES-DEVORE says that is the last contact she had with her husband.

OATES-DEVORE filed a missing person report with the SBSO on 6/28/97, at 7:00 PM, and immediately offered a $10,000 reward for information concerning DEVORE's whereabouts. The reward has since been increased to $100,000.

Lieutenant [] advised that efforts to locate DEVORE and his vehicle have to date been unsuccessful. Lieutenant [] said that credit card records indicate DEVORE purchased gasoline in Flagstaff, Arizona, on 6/27/97, at or about 6:00 PM; and at Fenner, California, on 6/27/97, at 10:10 PM. Lieutenant [] added that DEVORE can be seen on a video tape from a security camera installed at the gas station in Flagstaff. The SBSO has verified that a call had been made on DEVORE's cellular telephone from the Barstow, California, area at 12:30 AM on 6/28/97. Further review of cellular telephone records indicate that the DEVORES' cellular phone was in service ("on") in the area of Highway 14 and Highway 58 near Mojave, California, at 1:20 AM on 6/28/97. Search efforts by law enforcement authorities on land and in the air following logical routes between Barstow and Carpinteria have been fruitless in locating any indication of the whereabouts of DEVORE or his vehicle. It has also been reported to the SBSO that DEVORE carried with him a .38 caliber handgun, specific reason unknown except for general personal protection.

b7C

The SBSO has learned that DEVORE was having financial problems, particularly involving a dispute with the Internal Revenue Service concerning the NAT KING COLE estate. There has also been speculation in the media and from other parties that OATES-DEVORE or DEVORE's [] could be responsible for the possible murder of DEVORE. The only possible motives the SBSO is aware of to support such speculation is that DEVORE has a $1.5 million retirement fund with the SCREEN ACTORS GUILD that OATES-DEVORE could lay claim to upon DEVORE's death, and that [] could want DEVORE murdered relative to the Internal Revenue Service dispute.

b6
b7C

To: FBI Headquarters From: Los Angeles
Re: 7A-LA-208769, 07/10/1997

The SBSO also advises that OATES-DEVORE had a TYSON-HOLYFIELD party on 6/28/97 at her residence. She did not appear to certain witnesses to be grieving in any way, she talked about how she was going to spend DEVORE's money, and she was "coming on" to certain men in attendance.

Lieutenant [] said that this matter has received national media coverage, particularly by the celebrity oriented tabloid television programs. Lieutenant [] is hoping that coverage on the America's Most Wanted television program to be aired Saturday, 7/12/97, will result in some much needed information of value to solve this case.

b7C

Lieutenant [] expressed concern about dealing with the high level of media attention being given to this matter, as well as the logistical problems involved in conducting an investigation with a multiple state scope. That, as well as possible federal jurisdiction, is the reason for his request to the FBI for assistance.

b7C

To date, there is no ransom note involved or any other indication that DEVORE is being held for ransom; however, because of foul play being presumed, there being confusing fact patterns, the matter having an interstate nature, and the fact that additional investigation could result in the reasonable indication of federal criminal jurisdiction, it is necessary to institute a preliminary inquiry under the Federal Kidnapping Statute.

DEVORE is described as follows:

Re: 7A-LA-208769, 07/10/1997

Criminal record: None

Investigation at Los Angeles will continue with contact being made with appropriate authorities at SBSO to initiate and proceed as determined appropriate with logical preliminary investigation of the GARY MARTIN DEVORE matter in order to make an informed judgment as to whether a kidnapping investigation or any other matter within federal jurisdiction is warranted. Investigation, if applicable, to include interviews of knowledgeable police officials, family members, and other witnesses, possible setting of auxiliary office investigative leads, crime scene searches, Laboratory Division assistance, and other appropriate investigative techniques.

(The following investigation was conducted by Special Agent (SA) [redacted] on 7/15/97:

Based upon information provided to AMERICA's MOST WANTED (AMW), on 7/13/97, by [redacted] San Pedro, California, [redacted] work telephone [redacted] the following investigation was conducted regarding the disappearance of GARY MARTIN DEVORE:

The Interstate 15 (I-15) off-ramp described by [redacted] was determined to be Hodge Road which is located in the unincorporated area of the Mojave Desert, San Bernardino County, south of Barstow, California and 17 miles north of Victorville, California.

Bureau Agents conducted a search by vehicle and on foot of the area west of I-15. The paved portion of Hodge Road ends approximately one half mile west of I-15 and several heavily traveled dirt roads and desert trails are located in the area described by [redacted]

The dirt roads and accessible desert trails were searched with negative results. Bureau Agents also walked the area where [redacted] had observed a white Ford Explorer on 6/29/97. At the time of the search a prevailing breeze was coming from the west/southwest and no unusual odor was detected during the foot search.

With the assistance of the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department (SBSD), Aviation Division, an aerial search was conducted by helicopter of the desert area west of I-15 and Hodge Road with negative results.

INSTRUCTIONS:

An initial FD-705 must be submitted by OO within 21 calendar days after the initial report of a kidnaping is received. The submission of an FD-705 is required on all kidnaping cases opened, to include preliminary inquiries, and cases which are opened and later determined to lack the elements of kidnaping as defined by state or federal statute.

A supplemental FD-705 must be completed and submitted within 21 calendar days after one or more of the following developments occur:

1. Ransom demand
2. Subject(s) identified
3. Victim(s) located
4. Case closed

This form is to be used in addition to the regular reporting procedures set forth in Section 7, Manual of Investigative Operations and Guidelines. It will be used to collect and tabulate pertinent statistical data regarding kidnaping matters. To ensure accuracy, please provide all data possible by filling in appropriate blanks and checking all appropriate boxes.

Brief Synopsis:

On June 23, 1997, GARY MARTIN DEVORE left Carpinteria, California, en route to Santa Fe, New Mexico, to visit actress [redacted] who resides at [redacted] Santa Fe, New Mexico. DEVORE arrived at [redacted] residence on June 24, 1997. On June 27, 1997, DEVORE departed Santa Fe, en route back to Carpinteria, California. The last known contact with DEVORE was through a cellular telephone conversation between DEVORE and his wife, WENDY OATES-DEVORE at approximately 1:00 a.m., on June 28, 1997. OATES-DEVORE reported that DEVORE informed her that he planned to arrive at their home at approximately 4:00 a.m., on June 28, 1997. DEVORE told OATES-DEVORE that he was west of Barstow, California, during that conversation. The cellular telephone records indicate that DEVORE's last known location was near the intersection of Highway 14, and Highway 58 at Mojave, California, on June 28, 1997, at 1:20 a.m.

b7C

Search efforts by law enforcement authorities on land and in the air have been negative. DEVORE and the vehicle he was driving, a 1997 Ford Explorer, have not been found. There has been no ransom demand note, nor has there been any evidence to indicate what happened to DEVORE since his disappearance.

Title: UNKNOWN SUBJECT(S);
GARY MARTIN DEVORE - VICTIM;
KIDNAPPING

Synopsis: Lead set for Boston to determine validity of address, possibly associated with captioned victim.

Enclosures: Santa Barbara Bulletin regarding captioned victim which includes photograph.

Details: This investigation involves the mysterious disappearance of GARY MARTIN DEVORE, who was last heard from by his wife on 6/28/97. DEVORE, a white male, date of birth 9/17/41, is a screenwriter who was formerly married to NAT KING COLE's widow, MARIA COLE. DEVORE is currently married to WENDY B. OATES-DEVORE, white female, date of birth [REDACTED] Their residence is located at [REDACTED] Carpinteria, California. There has been considerable national media coverage concerning DEVORE's disappearance due to his association with the television and film industry.

On 6/23/97, DEVORE left Carpinteria, California, en route to Santa Fe, New Mexico, to visit actress [REDACTED] who resides at [REDACTED] Santa Fe, New Mexico. DEVORE arrived at [REDACTED] residence on 6/24/97. The purpose of the visit was to finish work on a script. DEVORE made the trip alone in a 1997 Ford Explorer, Eddie Bauer model, white in color, California license 3NGH592.

DEVORE left Santa Fe on Friday, 6/27/97, en route back to Carpinteria, California. OATES-DEVORE says that she received a cellular telephone call from DEVORE on at or about 1:00 a.m., on Saturday, 6/28/97. OATES-DEVORE reports that DEVORE told her that he was in the area west of Barstow, California, he was anxious to see her, and he would be home at or about 4:00 a.m., that same date. OATES-DEVORE says that is the last contact she had with her husband.

Re: 7A-LA-208769, 07/28/1997

OATES-DEVORE filed a missing person report with the Santa Barbara Sheriff's Department (SBSD), on 6/28/97, at 7:00 p.m., and immediately offered a $10,000.00 reward for information concerning DEVORE's whereabouts. The reward has since been increased to $100,000.00.

To date, efforts to locate DEVORE and his vehicle have been unsuccessful. There has been no demand for ransom, nor has there been any other indication of foul play, other than DEVORE's disappearance. Due to the interstate nature of this investigation, the SBSB has requested the assistance of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI). Therefore, a preliminary inquiry is being conducted.

A review of Savannah Information Technology Center (SITC) records, indicates that the DCS National Inquiry System has a record of a GARY DEVORE, born September 17, 1941, with an address of (no house number) House Bracz Road S, Tyringham, Massachusetts 01264. It is unknown at this time if the GARY DEVORE identified in this record is identical to captioned victim. It is important to this investigation to determine if that property is associated with captioned victim and if the property is owned or currently used in any way by captioned victim. At this point it is unknown if captioned victim met with foul play or disappeared by his own accord. It is possible that DEVORE may have staged his disappearance.

OATES-DEVORE advised that she had contacted this writer because she was dissatisfied with the investigative efforts of the Santa Barbara Sheriff's Department (SBSD). OATES-DEVORE stated that she was distraught over the fact that it had been six weeks since her husband's (GARY MARTIN DEVORE) disappearance and he has not been located. She stated that it was very difficult for her emotionally and financially and wanted everything possible to be done to locate her husband and resolve the matter concerning his disappearance. She advised that she had been in contact with BUCK REVELLE (phonetically spelled), a private investigator and former special agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), who was the number three man in charge of the FBI at one time. She was considering hiring him to assist in the investigation. OATES-DEVORE stated that she was concerned that the SBSB was not diligently covering all leads and that some parts of the investigation (i.e. obtaining cellular telephone records) were taking too long. She stated that she wanted the FBI to be more active in running the investigation. OATES-DEVORE was informed by this writer that the SBSB had primary jurisdiction in investigating this matter at this time.

Synopsis: Tyringham, Massachusetts investigation conducted with negative results.

Details: On 8/18-19/97, an investigation was conducted in the Tyringham, Massachusetts area in order to ascertain if victim may have possibly returned to his former residence in Tyringham. No evidence was obtained regarding the victim's current whereabouts.

Part-time Police Officer, [REDACTED] TYRINGHAM POLICE DEPARTMENT, was interviewed regarding victim. [REDACTED] advised that victim left the Tyringham, Massachusetts area approximately 18 years ago and has not been seen since that time. He noted that victim was the former husband of MARIA COLE and remarked that both victim and COLE also used to be the proprietors of the "Morgan House" restaurant in Lee, Massachusetts. [REDACTED] advised that the former residence of victim DEVORE, which is located on House Brace Road in Tyringham, was sold approximately one year ago for $1.2 million. [REDACTED] then advised the interviewing agent of the location of the former DEVORE estate and stated that he would advise the FBI if he should locate or observe the victim's 1997 Ford Explorer in the Tyringham area.

[REDACTED] Caretaker of the former DEVORE estate, advised that he has been the Caretaker at the estate since May, 1996. [REDACTED] upon being shown a copy of the missing person flyer from the Santa Barbara, California Sheriff's Department, advised that he has not seen victim at the estate. He reported no observations of a 1997 white Ford Explorer. [REDACTED] was then Enclosures: Enclosed for Los Angeles are 4 photographs, 2 of suspect's vehicle, and 2 of a new Montero "LS" sport utility vehicle.

Details: On 9/9/97, with the able assistance of reporting party, [REDACTED] DOB: [REDACTED] the suspect vehicle was located in a ravine just off of Trial B-10 near the community of Red Mountain, California, in Kern County.

b7C

The vehicle was lying on the passenger side, and had been torched with what appeared to be a large amount of super heated accelerant, making it unrecognizable as to brand and model. However, continuous inquiry at certain automobile dealerships in the Santa Clarita/Antelope Valley areas identified the burned out hulk as a Mitsubishi Montero "LS" sport utility vehicle (suv) with an "off road package," obviously not the victim's Ford Explorer.

Photographs were taken of the hulk, as well as a new vehicle at the dealers, and are enclosed to show how identity was effected.

Scenario Fit for Film

■ Gary Devore phoned his wife June 28 while driving in desert, then disappeared. Despite air and ground searches, flier distribution and heavy media attention, he's still missing.

By ROBERT W. WELKOS
TIMES STAFF WRITER

His wife has one theory: He could have been carjacked and suffered a severe head injury, the 1997 Eddie Bauer Edition Ford Explorer he was driving smuggled into Mexico and chopped up.

A Hollywood colleague has another theory: Someone lying in wait may have signaled to cohorts who forced him to stop.

Even the psychic who took part in the search has a theory: He received a blow to the right side of his head from at least two people, maybe three. He was moved a considerable distance—she saw a canyon, lavender flowers, streams. He is not in the spirit world, the vibrations tell her. He is, rather, between two worlds, perhaps in a coma.

Unspoken is the possibility that Gary Devore simply decided to walk away from his life—or that he is party to an elaborate Hollywood hoax.

It has now been a month since screenwriter Devore vanished without a trace while driving from New Mexico through the Southern California desert—his last known whereabouts determined by a cellular phone call to his wife at their beachfront Carpinteria home in the wee hours of June 28. There have been no sightings of him or the Explorer. No use of his credit cards.

Police agencies throughout Southern California, along with Devore's family and friends, have conducted air and ground searches, and the Santa Barbara County Sheriff's Department is coordinating an investigation that includes the FBI. Sheriff's Sgt. Bill Byrne said that Devore's name has been placed in a national crime computer and that detectives are backtracking his activities. And a flamboyant Hollywood-style publicity campaign has been mounted to keep interest in the case alive.

Devore's mysterious disappearance has shaken his family and caused anguish among some in the Hollywood film community, where Devore, 55, has been a productive writer with credits ranging from the movie "The Dogs of War," starring Christopher Walken, to the film "Running Scared," with Gregory Hines and Billy Crystal.

"It's extremely stressful for all of us," said Barry Rosenbush, a producer on the movie Devore was writing at the time he disappeared. "Not a word. Not a trace. Nothing. There is no closure. It's 'Hello, honey, I'll be home in a couple of hours,' and he's vanished. To all of us, it's like this open, gaping, psychological wound."

Said Gary Richman, a friend from junior high school days: "It was like he was sucked up somewhere."

So they wait, holding out hope that authorities or a private citizen turns up a clue to Devore's whereabouts. A $100,000 reward has been offered.

"I don't go along with the idea that a person can disappear into thin air," said his 82-year-old father, David Devore. "Other than Judge Crater, how many times does that happen?"

(Crater, a New York state jurist, vanished after catching a Manhattan cab on Aug. 6, 1930.)

Mike Webb, who works for Crutchfield Investigators in Beverly Hills, said it is impossible to pinpoint where Devore's cellular phone call originated, but it probably was inside a 25-mile radius near the desert communities of Mojave and Rosamond.

"Based on his conversation with his wife and where his last phone call came from, he took Highway 58 out of Barstow west," Webb said. "That leads into Mojave. We believe that logically, he would have taken Highway 14 south out of Mojave, if he was heading home. From there, he has options."

The search for Devore has been chronicled far and wide in the media, from local news outlets to such national TV shows as "Inside Edition" and "America's Most Wanted."

"We have incredible media coverage," said Wendy Oates-Devore, the missing man's wife. "Thank God we have had that available to us."

Psychics, private eyes, trackers, bloodhounds, pilots and stuntmen have scoured Southern California's High Desert looking for Devore.

To keep interest in the case high, a flashy publicity drive has been mounted by Devore's Los Angeles media consultant, Michael Sands, who likens his effort to a military campaign, dubbing it "Operation Desert Devore."

Sands is an actor-turned-public relations man who says he created the white chocolate chip cookie and once represented Mr. Blackwell, the designer known for his annual worst-dressed celebrity lists.

Sands said he sees the search as an "educational tool."

"It's like a combat manual for the public: how to find someone you are involved with, that you love, who is missing," he said. "We established the ground troops. We had our own air strikes."

Sands even said he has "plastic surgeons and brain surgeons ready to go" at a moment's notice should Devore turn up injured.

When the consultant learned from Oates-Devore that her husband was missing, he immediately went to work coordinating interviews.

On Sunday morning (June 29), I got calls from every TV station in town," Sands said. "They came over one by one. It was like a Mr. Blackwell kind of thing."

Sands freely gives out the phone numbers of Devore's wife, childhood friends and Hollywood colleagues. "I never deal in 'no comment,'" he said. "I like everyone to talk—win, lose or draw."

Sands put out a provocative press release with the headline "WITHOUT A TRACE: MOVIE TITLE OR REALITY? IS ART IMITATING LIFE OR THE OTHER WAY AROUND?"

It questioned whether Devore's disappearance might be linked to, among other things, "after-shocks around Barstow" or a lawsuit he has pending on appeal against the estate of singer Nat King Cole. (Devore was married nine years to Cole's widow, Maria.)

Sands said he posed the questions simply to spur interest. "I like to be creative and get people to think, because this is an entertainment-related story," he said.

Neither the Santa Barbara County Sheriff's Department, Devore's wife, nor even Sands said they believe that the lawsuit had anything to do with the disappearance.

Sands said he brought up the suit only because Devore once told him, "Someday you might want to mention it."

In a phone message left with a Times reporter, Sands playfully suggested that Devore's disappearance could make for a good movie, and even posited a cast—Diana Ross as Maria Cole, Jodie Foster as Oates-Devore and Martin Short as Sands.

Oates-Devore vigorously defends the media consultant. "I don't think he has overstepped."

anything," she said.

In the weeks since Devore disappeared, his wife said, she has grown increasingly disenchanted with the law enforcement effort to find him. At one point in an interview with The Times, she described investigators as "morons" after learning, to her dismay, that they had a surveillance photo of her husband—taken in a Flagstaff, Ariz., convenience store the night he drove west—but had not told her about it. She said she learned of the photograph from a TV reporter.

On Wednesday, Oates-Devore voluntarily underwent a three-hour lie detector test at the Santa Barbara County Sheriff's Department. Sgt. Byrne declined to discuss the results, but said that a polygraph was routine in such cases and that Oates-Devore is not a suspect.

Still, a distraught Oates-Devore believes otherwise. "I know they were looking at me," she said. "I'm just thrilled [Devore] didn't have a huge life insurance policy."

A former model from Palm Beach, Fla., and New York City, Oates-Devore came to Los Angeles in the mid-1970s to pursue an acting career. She later enlisted as an administrator for a Los Angeles plastic surgeon, Dr. Richard Ellenbogen, appearing on more than 100 radio and TV shows to discuss the pros and cons of plastic surgery.

She met Devore four years ago, she said, while getting her hair cut next to him at Cristophe in Beverly Hills. "We were talking about our mothers," Oates-Devore recalled.

They did not marry until January 1996, she said, "but we were inseparable from that time [when they met] on." She would become Devore's fourth wife.

People close to Devore say the man they know would never drop from sight without telling his family. They say he loved his wife, had no known enemies, did not take illegal drugs and was not depressed.

In fact, they noted, he was about to embark on an exciting new direction in his career as director on an RKO Pictures remake of the 1949 robbery caper "The Big Steal," which had starred Robert Mitchum. The remake was to be set at the Panama Canal.

Robert O'Connor, RKO's president of production, said Devore was in the midst of writing his initial draft when he vanished.

Before he set out, his wife said, Devore had been staying for a few days at the Santa Fe, N.M., home of actress Marsha Mason, working on the script.

"She was kind enough to give him her home," Oates-Devore said. "She had done that before because he was inspired there."

On Friday, June 27, Devore had packed up the Explorer about 11 a.m. He went to lunch with Mason and her niece, returning to Mason's around 2 p.m. He dropped the niece off at the Albuquerque airport and then headed to California, according to Oates-Devore. Mason declined to discuss the case.

Authorities originally said Devore was carrying a .38-caliber revolver for protection, but his wife later told The Times that she found the .38 and now believes he took along a .44-caliber Colt.

The 5 foot 11 inch, 185-pound Devore could look rugged and cowboyish with his boots, straw Stetson and salt-and-pepper beard. He had broken his right pinkie while playing high school football, and it is still a distinctive disfigurement.

He could have a short fuse, said producer David Foster, a close friend who worked with Devore on "Running Scared," but stressed that "at his core, he was a pussycat."

By all accounts, Devore knew the back roads, having been a truck driver years ago. Indeed, his screen-writing career took off with a 1981 film called "Back Roads," which starred Sally Field and Tommy Lee Jones. Devore named his company Back Roads Productions.

"I guess as a truck driver he saw a lot of things happen," Foster said. "That's how he became a writer. He saw a lot of weird things as a truck driver."

Friends said they couldn't imagine him ever telling his wife he would be home in three hours and then going off somewhere else.

The security camera in Flagstaff caught his image about 7 p.m. Friday as he bought some food.

At 10:20 p.m., Devore stopped for gas at the High Sierra Oasis station in Fenner, Calif., west of Needles, authorities said. The surveillance camera there was not operating.

Around 12:40 a.m. June 28, Oates-Devore said, she received a call from her husband saying he was tired but coming straight home. He said he had "broken the back of the script," meaning that he had achieved a breakthrough. "I may come home and go straight into my office and write for a few hours," she recalled him saying.

Oates-Devore also said her husband phoned her again about 1:15 a.m., but the cellular company has not yet provided a billing containing proof of such a call.

Byrne of the Santa Barbara County Sheriff's Department said he has no knowledge of that call, but added: "There is no indication that the wife is not being truthful."

Oates-Devore said she made her husband promise that he would pull over to the side of the road if he got tired. When he didn't arrive by 9 a.m., she called the California Highway Patrol and, that night, the Santa Barbara County Sheriff's Department.

"By that time," she said, "he had been missing long enough for seven cars to be chopped up in Mexico."

Devore's father has a theory that his son went to Panama, where his latest screenplay was to be filmed. But producer Rosenbush dismissed that hypothesis.

"When you do that kind of trip, the consul general of Panama would take you everywhere you want to go," Rosenbush said. Besides, he added, they had already been in touch with people there to make the film.

Meanwhile, Devore's wife is keeping up her vigil. She has taken to the skies in a helicopter and fixed-wing plane over the broad expanse of desert, searching. Bloodhounds have been used. Flyers have been handed out as far away as Tijuana, where some stuntmen checked on whether the car had shown up.

"The posters are on all those major roads" in the desert, said Richman, Devore's boyhood pal. "And up there offering a $100,000 reward, that's an awful lot of money."

At one point, the family contacted a psychic, Karen Prisant of Long Beach, who took part in the search. Prisant said that she thinks Devore is still alive but that he may be in a coma. "I feel he fell into trouble on Highway 58," she said. "I don't feel he is in that area now. . . . I feel his vibration for a split-second on [Highway] 14 and then it is gone."

Dear Special Agent

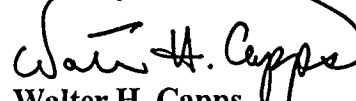

I am writing on behalf of the family of my constituent, Mr. Gary Devore, who has contacted my office regarding his recent disappearance.

Yesterday, my staff met with the family of Mr. Devore who feel that assistance from the Federal Bureau of Investigation would be quite beneficial in their quest to find their family member and close friend. The family states that Mr. Devore has been missing since June 27, 1997 after leaving Santa Fe, New Mexico on his way home to Santa Barbara, California, his place of residence.

The family feels that since the alleged disappearance occurred near Edwards Air Force Base and was not in a clearly defined region in the California desert, that assistance from the F.B.I. would be their best hope in locating Mr. Devore.

Thank you for agreeing to meet with the family and hear their story. If I may be of any assistance, please do not hesitate to contact my Santa Barbara District Office at (805) 730-1710.

Sincerely,

Wendy Oates-Devore, wife of Gary Devore.

■ People: It's been a year since screenwriter Gary Devore disappeared, and friends, family and police are no closer to discovering what became of him.

By ROBERT W. WELKOS
TIMES STAFF WRITER

Somewhere, during his drive home, perhaps along a stretch of highway in the Mojave Desert known for bikers, methamphetamine labs, chop shops and mine shafts too numerous to count, screenwriter Gary Devore's voice drifted over a cellular phone in the wee hours of June 28, 1997.

"Was that you trying to call me, sweetie?" Devore asked his wife, Wendy Oates-Devore, who was waiting for him at their beachfront home in Carpinteria.

"Who else would it be at 1 o'clock in the morning?" she asked. "Where are you?"

"I'm past Barstow," he replied, giving no hint to his exact location. He was not tired, he told her, even though she knew he had been driving straight through from Santa Fe, N.M. If he got tired, he assured her, he would pull off the road and get some shut-eye. Don't wait up.

"See you later," he said.

And with that, Gary Devore vanished without a trace.

The call had come in at 1:15 a.m., his wife remembered, although no billing records have ever been found to pinpoint that call. Oates-Devore said he might not have been allowed to use his own phone.

It has been a year since Devore's puzzling disappearance. In that time, family and friends have devised various scenarios as to what might have befallen the writer, whose credits included "The Dogs of War" starring Christopher Walken, and "Running Scared," with Gregory Hines and Billy Crystal.

Some believe he was carjacked and murdered, his 1997 Eddie Bauer Edition Ford Explorer driven to Mexico. Others believe he chose to drop from sight and get his bearings, and will one day return. Or, he has amnesia and can't find his way back.

Perhaps most bizarre of all, some even entertain the belief that no less than the Central Intelligence Agency might have had a hand in his disappearance, giving him a new identity and sending him on the biggest adventure of his life.

For those left behind, it is easier to concoct scenarios than to deal with the dearth of evidence: a few phone records, a security camera's image of Devore buying gasoline in Flagstaff, Ariz.; a credit card receipt at a gas station in Fenner, Calif.; a wife's recollection of final conversations.

It's like "The X-Files," they say. Maybe aliens have abducted him. How else to explain why there is no body, no vehicle, no use of a credit card. Still missing are his laptop computer containing a final screenplay, $20,000 in camera equipment, running gear, sunglasses, a diet journal, two large boxes of horse riding equipment and a .44-caliber Colt revolver that he had taken with him for protection.

All anyone knows for sure is that his last phone call on record, placed at 12:38 a.m., came from inside a 25-mile radius near the desert communities of Mojave and Rosamond. He apparently took Highway 58 out of Barstow heading west, leading into Mojave. Logic has it that he would have taken Highway 14 south out of Mojave if he were heading home.

Yet despite an extensive air and ground search, despite help from private eyes, professional trackers, bloodhounds and psychics, and despite public appeals on "America's Most Wanted" and numerous TV news programs, the mystery of Gary Devore has only deepened with the passing calendar.

"Nothing's changed," said Sgt. Mike Burrige, a spokesman for the Santa Barbara County Sheriff's Department. "I think if anything is unique about this case, it's that after all the investigative time and all the media attention it received, there is nothing evidentiary-wise to point in any one direction—and that is unusual."

But things have changed, if not in the case itself, then in the lives of those who were swallowed up in Devore's disappearance and now yearn for answers.

"It makes me sick," said Adrien Gordon of Santa Fe. "He's been one of my closest friends since I was 15. . . . I talked to him once a week. I'm so tired of trying to figure it out."

"Nobody wants to admit that someone might have died," said David Thompson of Sacramento, his friend for over a quarter of a century.

"Setting aside the worst of options, there is a part of me that says he has done an Australian walkabout," Thompson said. "It's a custom among aborigines. They just disappear off into the bush. You don't know why they've gone off or for how long."

Writer-producer Julia Phillips, who authored the tell-all Hollywood book "You'll Never Eat Lunch in This Town Again," knew Devore for more than 20 years.

"He was a wonderful human being," Phillips recalled, the kind of person "you could unload any kind of poison to if you couldn't reach your shrink or didn't want to go there anymore." Now, she feels her friend is dead. "One likes to hope he's not, although if he showed up now, he'd end up dead because we'd probably kill him!"

He had gone to New Mexico on June 1997, to work on a screenplay for an RKO remake of the 1949 Robert Mitchum robbery caper "The Big Steal." The remake, which Devore was to direct, was to be set in Panama.

Producer Barry Rosenbush said Devore had already handed in 49 pages of a draft along with an overview of the story he envisioned, but the remainder of the script, contained in Devore's laptop, is missing along with the computer.

"We have a treatment he wrote, a blueprint, of 25 pages," Rosenbush said. "Then we have some 40-odd pages of a draft of the script. But with writers, they'll write lots of different drafts. It's hard to tell if that was a scratch to get it on paper or where he had gone from that." In the year that has passed, the producer added, they have had to turn to another writer to develop the script.

Devore had gone to New Mexico to see if he could work through a severe case of writer's block and had been staying at the ranch of his friend, actress Marsha Mason. Mason declined to be interviewed for this story.

On the night before he left Santa Fe for California, Devore arrived at dinner at the home of Adrien Gordon. His image still haunts her memory.

"When I opened the door and he was standing there, he was so happy to see me," Gordon recalled. "He had the biggest smile. I always loved his face. He had a huge grin."

At 5 feet, 11 inches and 185 pounds, Devore was ruggedly handsome with a salt-and-pepper beard. He was 55, but still women adored him. He had been married four times. His wives included Maria Cole, the widow of singer Nat King Cole; Sandie Newton, now a broadcast journalist in Texas; Claudia Christian, an actress who appeared on TV's sci-fi series "Babylon 5"; and, at the time of his disappearance, Wendy Oates-Devore, a former model from Palm Beach, Fla.

"He was with probably every starlet in the world," Gordon recalled. "Gary and I were lovers—though not during his marriages—and best of friends throughout our lives. Yet there was never any jealousy. There was no ownership kind of thing."

But Gordon said her friend was a complicated human being.

"Gary had a very secretive side to him," she said. "I think he was many different people. I think he was very compartmentalized. Part of him was a redneck who liked to drink with cowboys and be with his horse. Part of him was a total womanizer. Gary also had a bad temper. . . . But he was always sweet and lovely with me. He had rough times and depression."

In the year that has passed, he appears to her in dreams, a big, hunky, wonderful guy. "I feel so blessed I was able to see him that last night," Gordon said, mentioning the photograph of the two of them dancing at her son's bar mitzvah. "I have that," she said. "Sometimes, it's really painful to look at it."

Many of his friends say Devore seemed happy and content in the weeks leading up to his disappearance. They noted that he was going to direct the remake of "The Big Steal," a source of great pride and excitement for a screenwriter.

But Newton, his former wife, who stayed in touch with him over the years, said she had had lunch with him shortly before he went to New Mexico and detected that something was amiss.

"In all fairness, he sometimes represents himself as being OK—he's a dramatist," she said. "He may have said to other people, 'I'm fabulous, I'm great,' but he had a long history of doubting himself."

Thompson agreed. "Depression would be a part of his makeup," he said. "He used to get writer's block and it would just kill him. He'd just feel this one tool, which was his big tool, was not in his grasp anymore and it wasn't going to come back. . . . He would berate himself for having lost it."

In one of his final conversations, he told his current wife, Oates-Devore, that he had "broken the back" of the screenplay he was working on, which she took to mean he had achieved a breakthrough.

Meanwhile, others point out that if Devore did choose to drop from sight, it came only months after his mother's death from cancer. He had been very close to her, they noted, and would never have vanished had she still been alive. Perhaps this was an opportunity to disappear without worrying his mother, they said.

The passing year has been hard for his wife. Not only was she racked by anxiety and pain, but his disappearance taught her to look at life differently. "You can never be certain of anything," she said.

For a brief time, she believed authorities suspected her in Devore's disappearance. Santa Barbara sheriff's detectives had asked her to take a lie-detector test, but she became ill and the test was never completed. But Burridge said that the test was routine and that she was never a suspect.

Oates-Devore, who met her husband while they were having their hair cut at Christophe's in Beverly Hills, has gone on television shows to discuss her husband's disappearance, without success.

"The only tips we got were from people from the panhandle of Florida, the same people who see flying saucers land in their yards," she said. "We got a call from one person who said, 'He's living next door and here's his picture.' He was a potbellied, bald-headed guy. What do they think?! I have less hope than I ever did."

Oates-Devore also has had to grapple with the financial consequences of her husband's disappearance. Under California law, a person cannot be declared dead for five years. In the meantime, she has gone to court seeking permission to pay his bills.

"You have to preserve his assets," Oates-Devore said. "I may sign his name for things, but I don't decide what bills are to be paid, the court does. It's not like his wife becomes conservator and, therefore, can get her hands on everything."

In recent months, Oates-Devore has tried to pick up the threads of her life. An actress who bears a resemblance to Cher, she recently auditioned on "Baywatch" and has been out on three movie-of-the-week auditions. "I've had callbacks," she said. "It will happen."

"This has been such a horrible personal experience," she added. "It's not just that I lost the one I loved, but the behavior of people."

She recalled sitting inside a Starbucks one day when someone told her that Devore had been miserable in his marriage.

"Why this person chose to say that to me at this time, I don't know," Oates-Devore said. "You know what I said to him? 'Maybe you're right. I know I was really happy.'"

But while Devore's disappearance has caused people to bond as well as pull away, they all remain mystified by what might have befallen him.

Some of Devore's acquaintances even entertain the thought that there may have been a CIA connection behind his disappearance.

In the weeks before he vanished, Devore had been calling a longtime friend at the CIA in Langley, Va., asking him questions about the U.S. invasion of Panama, former Panamanian strongman Manuel Noriega and about Noriega's involvement in drugs and money-laundering. Devore was basing his action-adventure screenplay on that invasion and wanted to know as much about it as possible for creative purposes.

"I remember talking to him about a lot of elements of Panama and Noriega's regime and the drug money that Noriega was alleged to have had stashed in safes in his offices and that's the money that, in [Devore's] script, soldiers stumble across and steal," said Chase Brandon, who works in public affairs at CIA headquarters.

"From that, we sort of drifted off and sort of talked about U.S. counter-narcotics programs in general," Brandon added. "I may have mentioned a couple things about the agency's role in providing increased U.S. intelligence efforts to provide support to U.S. law enforcement."

A 26-year veteran operations officer who has "experiences all over Latin America" for the CIA, Brandon said Devore asked if he would like to become a consultant on the movie if it was ever made. "I was considering doing that," Brandon said.

In a day-planner he left behind, Devore had written down Brandon's name and phone number frequently in the final weeks before he disappeared. Included was an entry on May 6, 1997, that read:

"Undersecretary for int'l narcotics makers. Chase [the name is crossed out]. Crime and narcotics center. CNC. Largest center in CIA. Espionage agents work with local police, gov't, etc. Do cover work on problems locals won't handle. Airfields, burn labs, fuel storage."

Brandon scoffed at suggestions that Devore was ever a CIA operative or that he may have dropped from sight to go on a mission for the agency.

"I will tell you with no uncertain terms, that is not the case," Brandon said. "... A lot of people would like to do this work and a lot of people in Hollywood say they do this work, in fact. But Gary was probably not either one of those."

Brandon, a cousin of actor Tommy Lee Jones, met Devore more than 15 years ago when he and the screenwriter were best men at Jones' wedding. One of Devore's first successes was the 1981 film "Back Roads," starring Jones.

"Gary was very happy," Brandon said. "He had reached a point where he was about to direct a movie. He was excited about that. The guy had the world by the coattails."

"His disappearance and probable death is just a horrible, horrible thing to come to terms with," Brandon said. "But I think, in my own sense of what logically happened to Gary, is that he was driving this new, high-profile, flashy Ford Explorer with all the package options on it and that is a vehicle that law enforcement people will tell you is a highly sought-after car for carjackers. ... My sense was Gary was one of those people who met a horrible, tragic quirk of fate. He was simply victimized by people who wanted that car."

Some of Devore's friends wrestle with whether to hold a memorial service.

"I'll probably have a memorial every year on the anniversary of his disappearance," Phillips said. "My father died three years ago. I talk to my father. . . . If a dead person is important to me, I carry them with me. I know it's a very retro attitude."

Others just try and find closure. "I think about it every day," said producer Rosenbush. "I wish I knew what happened to him. It's like one of those emotional ghosts that I'll carry with me forever."

Missing Writer's Body Believed Found

■ Mystery: Amateur sleuth's tip leads to discovery of Gary Devore's vehicle in aqueduct near Palmdale.

By DARRELL SATZMAN and SCOTT GLOVER
SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

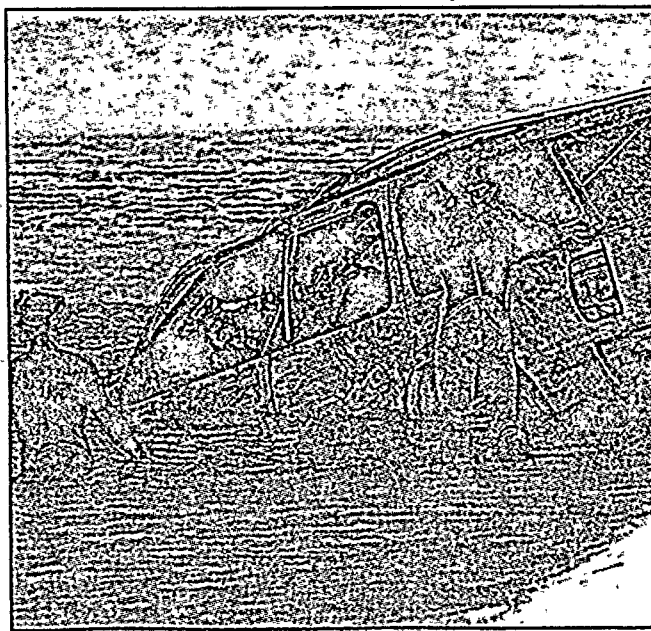

A puzzle that has haunted Hollywood for more than a year, the disappearance of screenwriter Gary Devore, was apparently solved Wednesday when an armchair detective, saying he was guided only by a newspaper account of the mystery, led investigators to Devore's vehicle submerged in an aqueduct near Palmdale, with a body still at the wheel.

Divers found a partially decomposed body dressed in blue jeans, a Western-style shirt and cowboy boots. They match the clothes worn by Devore when he disappeared, but final confirmation of the identity was pending.

Detectives said they believe Devore died in an accident but have not ruled out foul play.

Investigators were led to the spot in the California Aqueduct by Douglas Crawford, a San Diego man who said his interest was aroused by a newspaper story marking the one-year anniversary of Devore's disappearance. He retraced Devore's last known route, he said, until he came across evidence of a car wreck beside the aqueduct, and e-mailed his discovery Sunday to Devore's publicist, setting off Wednesday's underwater search.

Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department divers found the white Ford Explorer that Devore was driving when he vanished en route to his home in Santa Barbara County from a screenwriting job in Santa Fe, N.M., on June 28, 1997.

Crawford is not considered a suspect but simply provided a badly needed break in the case, said Santa Barbara County Sheriff's Department Sgt. Mike Burridge.

"Our detectives met with him and they had no reason to doubt what he said," Burridge said. "It seems like he did a good job of putting the facts together."

Crawford said that when he read about Devore's disappearance, it struck him as remarkably similar to the story of an Orange County woman who vanished on a trip to Montana some years ago and was later found to have crashed into the California Aqueduct.

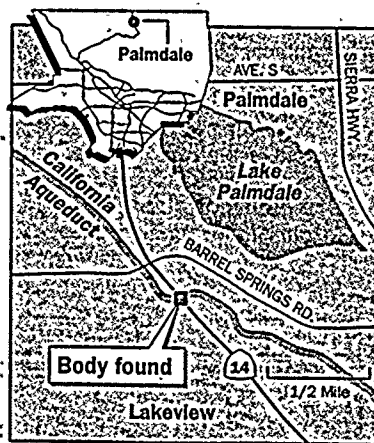

Devore had stopped for gas in Fenner, Calif., about 10:15 p.m. on June 27, 1997, and spoke with his wife by cellular telephone outside of Barstow about 1:15 a.m. the next morning.

"From this, I deduced that he was traveling in the direction of home, and he had traveled approximately 110 miles since refueling," Crawford said in the e-mail, which was forwarded to investigators with the Santa Barbara County and Los Angeles County sheriff's departments.

Crawford said that during his

Gary Devore was traveling through desert to his home when he vanished last year.

July 3 trip, he stopped at the spot where the Antelope Valley Freeway crosses the aqueduct. There, he found debris matching Devore's Ford Explorer.

In response to Crawford's message, Santa Barbara County sheriff's detectives began their search of the area Tuesday.

Inside Devore's Explorer, detectives on Wednesday found a 35-millimeter camera and a pottery vase, which they believe Devore may have purchased while staying at actress Marsha Mason's New Mexico ranch.

Investigators said they expect to identify the body through dental records.

"We know that Mr. Devore was last traveling southbound on the [Antelope Valley Freeway]. It looks like someone could have come off . . . and landed in the aqueduct," Burridge said. "I don't want to speculate. But if anything, he may have been tired. He was traveling straight through from Santa Fe and it was early in the morning."

Devore, 55, who had screen credits for the films "The Dogs of War" and "Running Scared," had a directing job when he disappeared.

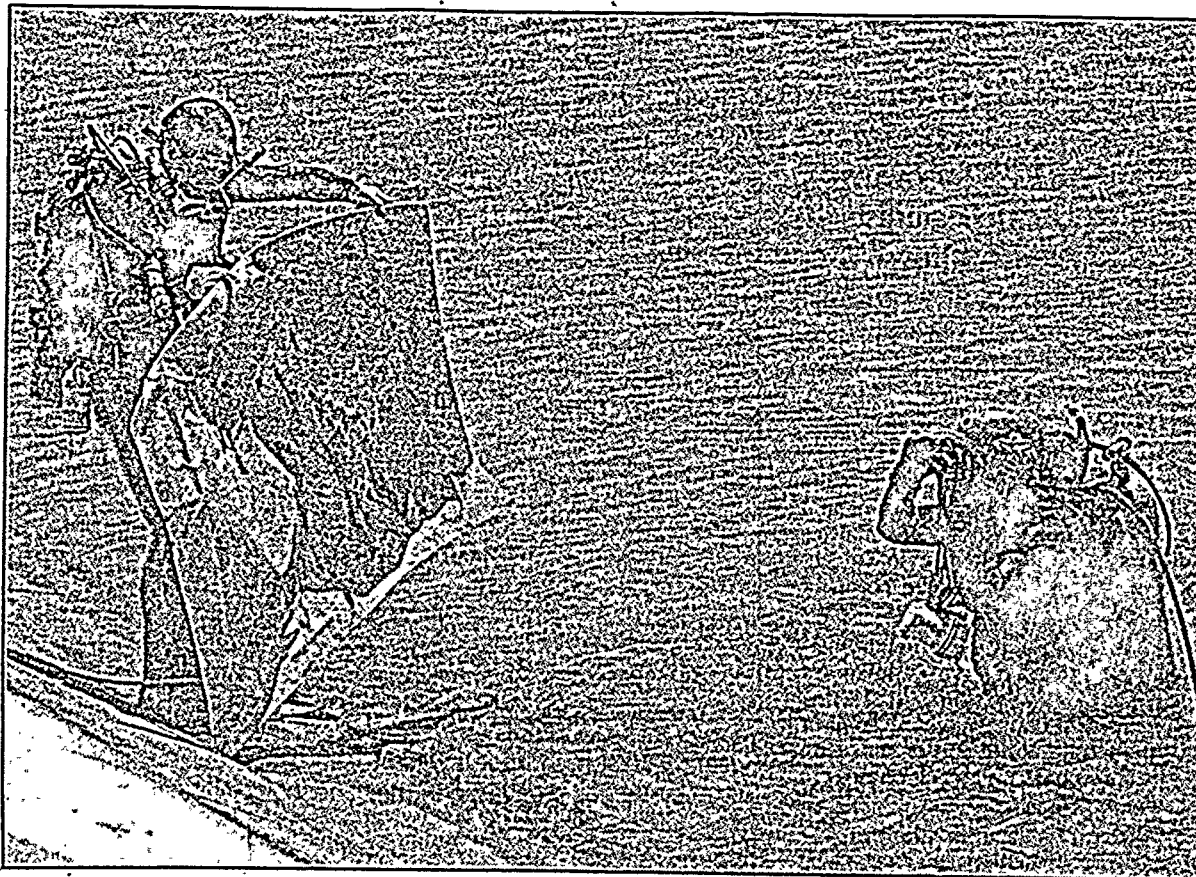

Wendy Oates-Devore, his wife, said the last conversation she had with her husband began: "Was that you trying to call me, sweetie?" Devore had called by cellular phone as he drove through the High Desert toward the couple's beachfront Carpinteria home.

"Who else would it be at 1 o'clock in the morning?" she answered.

Devore had just passed Barstow, and told his wife not to wait up.

On Wednesday, a grieving Oates-Devore said, "I assume that it's him. If it is, at least we have found him now. That's a very big relief."

Oates-Devore said that she also felt vindicated after having been asked by detectives to take a lie detector test. She believes she had been viewed with some suspicion.

Burridge credited Crawford with helping solve a mystery that had baffled law enforcement for more than a year, and did not question his motives.

"I don't think it's odd at all," Burridge said. "He was coming up here anyway to visit some friends and he thought he'd stop by and check it out. He came down here and he found [some debris from the crash], and he thought, 'Hey, I may be onto something.'"

Crawford declined to discuss the case, saying he had agreed to an exclusive paid interview with the television program "Extra."

"I didn't know the guy, that's all I'll say," Crawford said.

He refused to state his age or his occupation.

Devore's disappearance had spurred several theories from family and friends about what became of the handsome, rough-around-the-edges screenwriter.

Some believed he was carjacked and killed for his 1997 Eddie Bauer Edition Ford Explorer. Others believed he decided to drop out of sight for a while, and would one day return.

The most farfetched of the theories was that Devore had been recruited for a secret mission with the Central Intelligence Agency—based on several conversations he had with a friend who works in public affairs at CIA headquarters in Langley, Va.

Authorities conducted intensive ground and air searches shortly after his disappearance. But even features on "America's Most Wanted" and other television shows brought forth few clues.

Michael Sands, the publicist who passed Crawford's e-mail tip to investigators, said he was saddened to learn of his friend's death. At the same time, he said, he felt some relief.

"We're not in limbo anymore," Sands said while watching the recovery operation. "I mean, think of how many people never get to find their loved one."
